Conclusion Final Word/About the Author An excerpt from the book: Month one began very dramatically for your new little bundle. Birth was difficult, not just for your baby's mother, but for the baby, too! Her transition from a warm, quiet, comfortable existence into our loud, bright, and crazy world was exciting and exhausting, and now that you have brought her home, she has a lot of hard work to do adjusting to her new environment. At this stage your baby has two priorities: eat and sleep. Newborns can sleep 16-17 hours a day, and for the first few days, she will wake up only to eat. She will eat every 2-3 hours, and this is normal, though you should not expect an exact schedule. And keep in mind that a baby cannot be spoiled at this stage, so it's fine to attend to her immediately when she does wake up.
